Referencing & Citations

A guide to the NTI Harvard Referencing Style

The NTI Harvard referencing style is based on the Author-Date style and contains two elements:

- ✓ In-text citations – appear throughout your paper each time you refer to information from a source
- ✓ Reference list – a full list of all sources referred to throughout your paper

Important: There are many versions of the Harvard referencing style. This guide presents the format expected from students at Nan Tien Institute and should be your first point of reference before consulting other online guides.

Common issues

	Issue	Example
Multiple authors	For 1-3 authors, list all surnames in in-text citation, and for 4 or more list first name only, followed by 'et al.' See: Books, ebooks and chapters examples for more detail	In-text citation: (Miller et al. 2003) Reference list entry: Miller, J, Flood, E, Bishop, P & Sawyer J 2003, Representations of nature in modernist literature, Penguin, London.
Pages	When referencing page numbers, abbreviate page as 'p.' for one page and 'pp.' for span of pages	(Clark 2011, p. 3) (Frederickson 1997, pp. 45-46)
Dates	If you cannot identify the date of a source, put 'n.d.' in place of the date.	(Garner n.d.)
	If you can only identify an approximate date, put 'c.' for circa before the date.	(Sampson c. 1930)
Place of publication	Some books will name more than one place of publication on the title page. Use only the first one. If you cannot identify the place of publication, put 'n.p.' in place of the location. If the place of publication has a name that can be confused with other locations, add more detail to specify.	Tillman, S 1979, Introduction to Sewing, Bloomsbury, n.p. Instead of just 'Cambridge', include 'Cambridge, Mass' or 'Cambridge, UK'
Sources with same name and year	Add the letter 'a' and 'b' to the date in both the in-text citation and the reference list entry to distinguish between the two sources.	(Smith 2000a) and (Smith 2000b)
Multiple references at once	Include all references within the same pair of brackets and separate each reference with a semi-colon.	(Clark 2011; Frederickson 1997; Garner n.d.)

In-text citations

In-text citations signal that you have mentioned an idea or piece of information found in another source. Anytime you quote a source, or paraphrase information found elsewhere, you should include a citation so the reader can see where the information came from. Here are a couple of examples:

Style	Example
If referring to an entire work, the author's surname and year of publication in brackets will suffice. No page numbers are required for such a general mention.	Online reading practices impact the ability to focus and read deeply (Carr 2011).
If quoting or paraphrasing/discussing a specific section of a work, you must include the specific page number so the reader can identify the relevant section.	... can result in using the internet "as a replacement for, rather than just a supplement to, personal memory" (Carr 2011, p. 180).
Note: Turnitin will only recognise quotes if they are enclosed within double quotation marks (" ").
It is recommended that citations go at the end of a sentence to read smoothly. However, if the citation refers to only one part of the sentence, it can be placed wherever it is most relevant.	... in order to "create different brains" (Carr 2011, p. 210), and therefore ...
If the author's name sits outside the brackets as part of the sentence, the citation is best placed directly after the name.	Carr (2011, p. 83) suggests...
In-text citations should go BEFORE a full stop. Treat the citation as if it is still part of the sentence. If your citation is in the middle of a sentence, place a comma after the citation.	Online reading practices impact the ability to focus and read deeply (Carr 2011).
For quotes over 30 words, begin the quote on a new line and indent to set apart from your paragraphs. Enclose the quote in double quotation marks. Place the citation after the full stop and concluding quotation mark, rather than before the full stop as you would normally do.	... disadvantages of online practice: "We're no longer guided towards a deep, personally constructed understanding of the text's connotations. Instead we're hurried off toward another bit of related information, and then another, and another. The strip-mining of 'relevant content' replaces the slow excavation of meaning." (Carr 2011, p. 166).
When referring to a source you haven't read that is quoted in a source you have read. In the reference list you do not need to include any mention of the secondary source.	According to Culkin (as cited in Carr 2011, p. 210) ...

Figures, Images and Tables

When writing an assessment, you may include figures (in the form of images, tables, graphs, maps or charts). Like material from any other source, you are required to include a citation with all figures.

Tables and figures are numbered in the order that they appear in your assessment.

Question	Answer
How do I format a citation for a figure?	Figure citations follow the same format as all other in-text citations, however you should include the Figure number given in the source if available. For example, if the table you included is Figure 3 in the source, format your citation: (Janssen & Janssen 1990, Fig. 33, p. 77)
Where do I include the citation?	Include the citation in the caption for your figure. For tables, the caption should appear above the table. For other figures (e.g. images), the caption should appear below the figure. Table 1: Expected maximum daily temperatures in Adelaide (Janssen & Janssen 1990, Fig. 33, p. 77)
Do I need to include the citation when referring to a figure in the body of my assessment?	It is not essential to repeat the citation in the body of your assessment. Any mention of the figure in the body (e.g. "In Table 1...") will draw the reader's attention to that caption. However, you can repeat the citation in the body of your assessment if you feel it would be beneficial, for example if the figure does not appear on the same page as the paragraph in which you mention it.
Do citations in a figure caption need a reference list entry?	Yes, any source cited in the caption of a figure must have an entry in the reference list. Format the reference list entry as appropriate for the type of source. For example, if you have included a table from a book, include a reference entry for that book (see: Books, ebooks and chapters), such as: Janssen, RM & Janssen, JJ 1990, Growing up in Ancient Egypt, The Rubicon Press, London.
How do I cite a figure I have slightly adapted/changed?	Any table or figure that you have changed in any way (such as excluding some data, cropping or editing of an image) should be captioned as: Table 1: Expected maximum daily temperatures in Adelaide (amended from Janssen & Janssen 1990, Fig. 33, p. 77)
How do I cite a figure that I have created (e.g. a table of data I have compiled, or a photo I have taken)?	Any figure that you create should be captioned as: Figure 2: Title (Source: Personal collection)
Do I need to attribute the copyright owner of an image?	While images from physical sources and journal articles only require an in-text citation, images that you have found on the internet should also include copyright details in the caption. For guidance on identifying the copyright owner and formatting your copyright attribution, see Copyright for Students .

Special circumstances for sutras and canonical texts

	Issue	Example
Names with non-English religious titles	The NTI Harvard referencing system requires the [surname, first name] format for author names, but the authors of Buddhist texts will often only have a single name and a religious title (e.g. bhikkhu). To preserve the standard format, it is suggested that you treat the religious title of the individual as a first name and format as [name, title], rather than only including the name, or leading with the title. Some names have two parts that cannot be meaningfully inverted (e.g. Tibetan names with two given names but no surname, or profound figures). For in-text citations include both names, and for the reference list entry retain the names in their normal order.	His Holiness, the 14th Dalai Lama → Dalai Lama XIV OR Dalai Lama (Tenzin Gyatso) Venerable Juewei → Juewei OR Juewei, S Bhikkhu Bodhi → Bodhi, B Ajahn Brahmavamso → Brahmavamso, A Ayya Khema → Khema, A Mahasi Sayadaw → Mahasi, S Thera Nyanaponika → Nyanaponika, T Thich Nhat Hanh → Nhat Hanh, T Venerable Master Hsing Yun → Hsing Yun Kelsang Gyatso → keep as is Pema Chödrön → keep as is
Sutras and classical texts with no author	As with standard NTI Harvard practice, if a book has no author, use the title in the in-text citation and begin the reference list entry with the title.	See: Books, ebooks and chapters
Online sutras	Online sutras can follow the same format as any other web page	e.g. Thanissaro, B (trans.) 1998, Mulapariyaya Sutta: The Root Sequence, Access to Insight, viewed 19 October 2022, https://www.accesstoinsight.org/tipitaka/mn/mn.001.than.html
Pali texts	In-text citations for Pali texts follow a specific method of abbreviation based on the Pali Text Society editions (See: Decoding references to Pali Texts). There is no requirement to use this additional reference style in your assessments here at NTI, only the NTI Harvard citation is required. However, it is a common method used by Buddhist scholars and may be useful for those who intend to do further work in the field. If you do choose to include the Pali citation, you should still include the NTI Harvard in-text citation.	... the translation of this passage (SN IV 208) by Bhikkhu Bodhi (2000) differs markedly from the earlier one by Davids & Woodward (1917) ...

Using AI and Generative AI (GenAI) Tools

REMEMBER: According to the Student Academic Integrity and Academic Misconduct Policy, you may ONLY use AI or GenAI to generate academic content if:

- Your lecturer/subject coordinator has explicitly permitted you to do so, and
- You correctly acknowledge and reference the tool(s) you have used.

AI and GenAI Tools are a quickly evolving technology and this advice may change, check this guide regularly for any updates.

If you have used an AI or GenAI tool while working on your assessment, there are three components that you must include:

- An in-text citation (if relevant) and entry in your Reference List, as per all other sources
- An Acknowledgements section before your Reference List, detailing which tools you used and how they were used
- If you cannot retrieve a link to the data generated by the AI tool, an appendix should be added to the end of your assessment with a copy of the data

Referencing AI and GenAI Tools

When referencing an AI or GenAI tool, format your reference as you would a website (see: Websites).

In-text citation	(Program Year) e.g. (ChatGPT-4o 2024)
Reference list entry	Program Year, Title of conversation, Developer, viewed date, link to conversation e.g. ChatGPT-4o 2024, Time Planning for Essays , OpenAI, viewed 11 May 2024, https://chat.openai.com/share/29f67b60-7fff-46e0-b1bc-557cd227d982

Acknowledgements of AI and GenAI Tools

If you have used AI or GenAI tools for your assessment, you must include an Acknowledgements section before your Reference List.

If you can retrieve the link to the data Mention which tool(s) you have used, the version of the tool, and briefly describe how you used the data (e.g. whether you asked for sources, whether you generated an initial draft of your introduction). Mention what entry/entries in the Reference List contain the link.	I used ChatGPT-4o to generate a timetable for me to complete my essay in time for the due date. The full record of the prompts used and data generated can be accessed via the link provided in the ChatGPT-4o 2024 entry in the Reference List.
If you cannot retrieve the link to the data Mention which tool(s) you have used, provide a link to the tool(s) and briefly describe how you used the data (e.g. whether you asked for sources, whether you generated an initial draft of your introduction). Mention what Appendix (for instance, A or B) contains the full record of the prompts used and data generated.	I used ChatGPT-4o (https://chat.openai.com) to generate a timetable for me to complete my essay in time for the due date. Please see Appendix A for a record of the prompts used and data generated.

Appendix of the Data

Some AI and GenAI tools will allow you to share a URL directing others to your conversation. In such cases, the URL should be included in your Reference List entry so that your subject coordinator can revisit the text that was generated by your prompts. When you have included such a link in the Reference List entry, you do not need an Appendix.

However, some AI and GenAI tools will not allow you to generate a link directly to the conversation, and in such cases you should copy and paste the entire conversation in an appendix at the end of your assessment (after the Reference List). As with any appendix, this will not be counted in your word count, so do not shorten or summarise the data. It is important for your subject coordinator to have access to the text produced by AI in order to accurately mark your assessment.
